Increasing Representation of Women and Non-Binary Artists on Wikipedia

April 29 | 12 p.m.–4 p.m.

Surrey, BC – Surrey Art Gallery is partnering with Rungh Magazine to increase the representation of women and non-binary artists on Wikipedia by hosting an in-person Art + Feminism Wikipedia Edit-a-thon on Saturday, April 29 from 12 p.m. to 4 p.m. at the Gallery. Admission is free.

There is a significant gender gap on Wikipedia. Studies estimate that less than 15% of contributors identify as women. Gender inequities on Wikipedia contribute to a bias in content and language, as well as the erasure of knowledges and histories.

Art + Feminism is an international initiative that builds a community of activists who are committed to closing information gaps related to gender, feminism, and the arts, beginning with Wikipedia. For over ten years, they have welcomed anyone and everyone of all gender identities and expressions to attend or organize Art + Feminism events to edit Wikipedia.

Surrey Art Gallery and Rungh Magazine would like to help address this gap and are inviting people of all gender identities and expressions to make an impact and support gender equality and the arts on one of the world's most popular sites. In this event, participants will learn how to research, create a user account, publish Wikipedia pages, and edit and maintain entries.

Participants are welcome to come with ideas for entries that need updating or creating. Pre-researched artists and artworks from Surrey Art Gallery's permanent collection will also be available for entry.

No prior knowledge or practice of editing Wikipedia is required. However, to create new entries, participants must be registered Wikipedia users and have made ten previous edits on existing pages.
